Iain Watson Gallaway QSO, MBE

Iain Gallaway was a man of many talents, but for most he was simply the genial voice of Otago and New Zealand cricket.

Although a lawyer in the family firm, Iain's first love was sport, where he commentated on rugby and then cricket for 40 years. In 1992, Iain retired from broadcasting and subsequently became President of New Zealand Cricket.

The consummate professional, Iain's wisdom was revered by sports and business people alike.

He held many board positions, including the Broadcasting Corporation of New Zealand, NZ Sports Foundation, DIC department store, the Murray Halberg Trust and the Diocesan Trust Board. He was Chancellor of the Diocese of Dunedin for 25 years.

While at Christ's College, Iain was Head of Jacobs House in 1940, and spent two years each in the 1st XI and 1st XV. He maintained a life-long association with College, serving on the Board for several years and was a life member of the Old Boys' Association.
